Honey Slams Opponents for Congress

Charles Honey of Prescott criticized his other opponents in the race for 4th District Congressman Saturday for taking stands against him instead of trying to help South Arkansas. "There's enough work to be done in South Arkansas to take care of all the excess energy that has been displayed in this campaign, Honey said at political rallies in Fordyce, Crossett and Dumas. "We ought to work together shoulder to shoulder toward building South Arkansas, rather than trying to take each other apart."

His opponents had stopped talking about trivillies and begun talking about personalities in recent weeks, Honey said.

Some of his opponent's statements are allowing some newspaper editors "the opportunity to work night and day writing worthless trivia on matters that doesn't amount to a hill of beans," he said.

Another candidate, Richard Arnold, addressed the rallies and brought up education, giving two reasons why the improvement of education in the state is important.

"First, Arnold said, 'It will raise the quality of the daily lives of our citizens, and second, it will enable use to compete more successfully for jobs and industries.'"

He asserted that the state could improve its schools by accepting federal aid while keeping federal interference at a minimum.

State Rep. David Pryor commented at the rallies that the executive branch of the federal government has become "a bureaucratic jungle."

agencies involved in educational programs," Pryor said. "There are more than 250 welfare programs, over 50 job training programs and 65 federal health department programs."

He said that he wasn't against any of the programs, however, but thought the approach was a "helter-skelter" one. There is too much overlapping and too much waste in many federal programs, he said.

"There must be unified and comprehensive programs in these areas," Pryor said. "It seems to me here is another area where the federal government could start economizing."

You will find men who want to be carried on the shoulders of others, who think that the world owes them a living. They don't seem to see that we must lift together and pull together. — Henry Ford, American industrialist.

Well Known Church to Be Demolished

This was one of Washington's best-known churches today on the eve of its demolition. It was the church of at least eight presidents, most recently of Dwight D. Eisenhower.

The Rev. Dr. Elson noted that all of the historical fixtures — including the pews used by presidents — will be in the new building.

President Johnson has attended services in the present church which is just around the corner from St. Matthew's Roman Catholic Cathedral where funeral services were held for President John F. Kennedy.

HELEN HELP US!

by Helen Bittel

Time To Be Kind
Dear Helen: My husband does not speak to my parents who are in their 70's. It makes my heart bleed to think of them sitting alone on holidays, birthdays, etc. It makes it very hard for our boys, ages nine and 11, and for me.

Don't you think my husband should swallow his pride and at least visit them occasionally? This is the winter of their lives. — Torn Apart

Dear Torn: You didn't say, but I imagine your husband is getting even for slights he may not even fully remember.

I hope he realizes before it's too late that revenge is a boomerang which hits the sender, or those close to him, the hardest blow of all.

If you can't budge your mate, why not ask your parents to send him a note of reconciliation? Perhaps he wants to give in but pride won't let him take the first step. — H.

Isn't believe me! It can kill. You once said, Helen, "Are these writers reporting a trend or creating one?" and you could not be right!

Why, why, WHY are they flooding the market with articles aimed at breaking down the morals and drive of our young people, implying its square to be straight? — Scared Square

Dear Square: I've said it before and I'll say it again: Writers and publishers like to eat well, and sensationalism sells. Their newest approach is "Play it cool," and I'll get along with you — this semi-acceptance scares me green.

However, young people — more than adults — have learned to read with argument. Talk to them and you'll discover they aren't greatly influenced by their "chroniclers." They're making up their own minds and the majority still tend to be more square than "rounder."

Though, of course, it isn't "in" to come right out and say so. The "Talk" rebellion, "act" conformist.

Let's hope the writing pendulum swing back — it will come: the market is saturated. And always remember Read With Argument! Controversial articles are written to make you think and disagree, not swallow and moan. — H.

This column is dedicated to family living, so if you're having kid trouble or just plain trouble, let Helen help YOU.

Grand Slam by Smith, Bosox Sweep

By RON RAPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer

George Smith was 1-1, Billy Herman was sorry and Tom Yawkey was buying.

The beer was on the house in the Boston dressing room Sunday after Smith, the Red Sox second baseman, who is prized mainly for his fielding, hit a grand-slam home run in the bottom of the 10th inning to give last-place Boston a 10-6 win over Chicago, a sweep of a double-header and its fifth straight victory.

Boston owner Yawkey phoned Herman, the club's manager, in the dressing room after the game and announced that the suds were on him. Normally, the players have to buy their own. But all Smith was interested in was a little sleep.

"It was not only a long day," said Smith, "it was a long week. Four doubleheaders in a week are rough. However, it doesn't bother you too much when you win."

Herman allowed that the club might need a rest at that, but said, "I'm sorry that the All-Star Game break comes at this time. I'd like to keep on playing every day now."

Boston, which has won nine of its last 10 games, is within 1 1/2 games of escaping the league's cellar. The New York Yankees, who dropped a pair to Washington, are making like a potential last-place club.

The Yanks lost to the Senators 3-2 and 9-2, while Minnesota beat Detroit 4-2, California shut out Baltimore 4-0, and Kansas City knocked off Cleveland twice 4-1 and 5-3.

In the National League, Pittsburgh beat New York 9-4, Cincinnati clipped San Francisco 2-1, Chicago smothered Philadelphia 10-2, Houston edged St. Louis 6-5 and Atlanta blanked Los Angeles 2-0.

Smith, who lined a 3-1 pitch off Chicago reliever Juan Pizarro for his seventh homer this season, said, "I was looking for the fast ball, figuring it was the only thing he could throw me in such a situation. It was inside, just above the belt and I knew it was gone as soon as I connected. It sure felt good."

Yankee Manager Ralph Houk, who had hoped to have the team at .500 by the All-Star break, watched the Yanks fall 12 games behind that mark and 20 1/2 games behind the league-leading Orioles. Homers by Ed Brinkman and Bob Savarine gave Washington the victory margin in the first game, while blasts by Willie Kirkland and Ed Brinkman powered the Senators in the second game.

Two-run homers by Harmon Killebrew and Don Mincher got the Twins past second-place Detroit despite Al Kaline's fourth round-tripper of the series.

Grand Slam by Smith, Bosox Sweep

By RON RAPOPORT
Associated Press Sports Writer

George Smith was 11-1, Billy Herman was sorry and Tom Yawkey was buying.

The beer was on the house in the Boston dressing room Sunday after Smith, the Red Sox second baseman, who is prized mainly for his fielding, hit a grand-slam home run in the bottom of the 10th inning to give last-place Boston a 10-6 win over Chicago, a sweep of a double-header and its fifth straight victory.

Boston owner Yawkey phoned Herman, the club's manager, in the dressing room after the game and announced that the odds were on him. Normally, the players have to buy their own. But all Smith was interested in was a little sleep.

"It was not only a long day," said Smith, "it was a long week. Four doubleheaders in a week are rough. However, it doesn't bother you too much when you win."

Herman allowed that the club might need a rest at that, but said, "I'm sorry that the All-Star Game break comes at this time. I'd like to keep on playing every day now."

Boston, which has won nine of its last 10 games, is within 1½ games of escaping the league's cellar. The New York Yankees, who dropped a pair to Washington, are making like a potential last-place club.

The Yanks lost to the Senators 3-2 and 9-2, while Minnesota beat Detroit 4-2, California shut out Baltimore 4-0, and Kansas City knocked off Cleveland twice 4-1 and 5-3.

In the National League, Pittsburgh beat New York 9-4, Cincinnati clipped San Francisco 2-1, Chicago smothered Philadelphia 10-2, Houston edged St. Louis 6-5 and Atlanta blanked Los Angeles 2-0.

Smith, who lined a 3-1 pitch off Chicago reliever Juan Pizarro for his seventh homer this season, said, "I was looking for the fast ball, figuring it was the only thing he could throw me in such a situation. It was inside, just above the belt and I knew it was gone as soon as I connected. It sure felt good."

Yankee Manager Ralph Houk, who had hoped to have the team at .500 by the All-Star break, watched the Yanks fall 12 games behind that mark and 20½ games behind the league-leading Orioles. Homers by Ed Brinkman and Bob Savarine gave Washington the victory margin in the first game, while blasts by Willie Kirkland and Ed Brinkman powered the Senators in the second game.

Two-run homers by Harmon Killebrew and Don Mincher got the Twins past second-place Detroit despite Al Kaline's fourth round-tripper of the series.

THE WELL CHILD

Don't Overprotect The Asthmatic Child

BY WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.

Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Although asthma is a disease that affects many adults, in most cases it has its onset before the age of 5. The first sign of asthma in most children is a recurrent cough. Later the coughing is associated with wheezing. It is important to remember, however, that all wheezing is not due to true (allergic) asthma. It may also be caused by inhaling a nut, popcorn or other foreign body. When this is the cause, removal of the offender through a bronchoscope cures the wheezing.

In many cases of asthma one or more members of the victim's family have asthma or some other form of allergy such as hives or hay fever. An environment of emotional tension is an important factor in other cases. The immediate cause may be animal dander, house dust, a pollen or some food.

A study was made recently on a group of newborns who were closely related to asthmatics. One half were given the usual varied diet and the other half were given no foods containing cow products, chicken, eggs or wheat in their first nine months of life. In the next 10 years, five times as many on the varied diet developed asthma as in the group with the restricted diet.

Another factor in causing or aggravating asthma is repeated attacks of respiratory infection.

About 50 per cent of the children with mild asthma outgrow it by the time they are 15. If they have an associated eczema or hay fever, their chances of outgrowing the asthma are poor and if the victims are girls their chances are not as good as if they are boys. Those who have severe or frequent attacks usually have the disease throughout their lives.

The first step in the treatment is to find and eliminate — especially from the bedroom — the immediate cause of the attacks. This may be a chair stuffed with horse hair, a feather pillow, woolen clothes or a pet dog or cat. An often-neglected part of the treatment is to see that the child gets enough fluid. Daily doses of potassium iodide may help by loosening the secretions of the bronchial tubes.

For acute attacks inhalation of adrenalin through an atomizer usually gives dramatic relief. If the condition is persistent, small daily doses of cortisone may be required and in some children desensitizing injections may be helpful.

If your child has asthma you should avoid overprotecting him because this will add to his emotional problems as he grows older. When he starts to go to school you should tell his teacher about his condition and he should be allowed to take his medicine in school when it is needed.

SundayNext For Rabbi?

SATURDAY THE RABBI WENT HUNGRY. By Harry Kemelman. Crown. $3.95.

The reader gets double — or maybe triple — his money's worth in this book. You get a murder mystery, armchair variety, in which a rabbi solves the crime, an intertwined plot involving cliques in the temple congregation and you — painlessly — learn a lot.

Kemelmann's style is easy to read and the reader can just zip along. You probably can guess who the murderer is from motive but if you're reading fast you probably won't arrive at the answer as the rabbi did — using logical deductions from his observations of small happenings and circumstances.

The rabbi uses the logic methods of the Talmud, one of them being — if some stated thing is so, then how much more sure would some other thing be.

Kemelmann's Rabbi David Small is old-fashioned, rabbi of a Conservative temple, but with an Orthodox background. As disagreements pop up about him among the members of the synagogue temple — as easily as happen when various persons hope for different responses from the person — the reader learns a lot about what a rabbi is and does.

Some members of the congregation expect the rabbi to be their spiritual leader, some want an employee who takes orders and some want a gregarious "representative of the Jewish community" to the rest of the town.

The rabbi remains in the Old Eastern European tradition, none of these things. He is instead a scholar and he is willing to learn. For example, he explains Jewish thinking as a scholar. He is ready to learn and to use his finely honed reasoning powers to judge disputes, settle matters of conscience, and clear up puzzles.

Says a rabbi would sound like a modern suburban neighborhood. Rabbi Small's dialogue is — bare — to be expected from his congregation for the "Friday the Rabbi Slept Late" and this book.

Let's hope they keep him at least until next Sunday.

The U.S. Public Health Service estimates there are two million or more undiagnosed cases of diabetes in the nation.

100-Degrees Tough
Old Lady Gazette
Puts Us to Work

Outspoken though I may be I am much less certain than some milder editors that my written view is always right.

For instance, when the thermometer hit an official 100 degrees Sunday I thought about all those unfortunate candidates stumping the state before sparse crowds, and between the candidates on the broiling rack and newspaper editors in their air-conditioned offices I confess all my sympathies for the moment were with the politicians—right or wrong.

Opinion is affected by personal experience. You see, I have been on the stump twice myself circulating state-wide petitions, and, believe you me, that's something for which few editors have the inclination or guts.

If you noted that The Star last Saturday carried the major league standings and the full roundups of games in the American and National you can thank the lazy old lady known as the Arkansas Gazette for it.

Since it is the morning state paper the Arkansas Gazette might rightly be expected to carry a complete sports report on yesterday's news. But the Gazette insists on sending us its first edition, whose news isn't much later than what The Star tells you the afternoon before.

Saturday a week ago, July 2, The Star came out with no sports, and there was a loud outcry because the Gazette that morning had no baseball results at all—going to press before any of the night games were finished.

It was a lousy performance—the Gazette pronouncing pontifically on strange foreign questions but overlooking its bread-and-butter sports.

The Star should, of course, carry complete sports regardless; and we do five days a week—but a Saturday evening paper is published at a heavy loss, too late for advertising this week, and too early for next week. So we cut corners on Saturday, rather than discontinue Saturday afternoon publication entirely as so many evening locals have done.

Therefore the Gazette's refusal to carry its own weight as the state morning paper has increased our own burden on Saturday.

We'll carry it—but with salt in our shotgun for every time someone mentions the Big Stink from Little Rock.

DFA Would
Reorganize
Government

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — An executive order to create a commission for the reorganization of state government was recommended by Democrats for Arkansas Saturday in the latest of a series of position papers.

Such a move could result in a $15 million annual saving for the state if the reorganization was as successful as ones conducted in Ohio and Wisconsin, DFA said.

Studies of this nature are expected to save Wisconsin $35 million annually and Ohio $55 million a year when recommendations are fully implemented, the organization said.

It is impossible and probably presumptuous for anyone to attempt to state in advance where the savings can be made in Arkansas because the findings vary from state to state," the paper said.

The organization said such a commission should be composed of leading citizens "with a large to thoroughly explore government seeking ways to promote efficiency and to effect economy in the operation of state government."

Most of the savings would come in small amounts, the paper said, but added together could amount to substantial sums.

The DFA anticipated that most of the recommendations of such a study could be carried out by executive order.

Editor The Star: I thought you might be interested in an error in the enclosed news item page One item headlined "Washington Foundation Board Meets" in The Star of Friday, July 9.

The Royston House in Washington, Ark., was not built by my father, Charles E. Royston (born in Washington March 8, 1843), but it was built by my grandfather, General G. M. D. Royston (born in Carter County Tennessee in 1809) who came to Washington in 1832. He is credited with having brought to Washington from Louisiana the Magnolia trees now growing in Washington.

It might interest you to know that both my father, Capt. Charles E. Royston, and my mother Mary (Mollie) Andrews, born on March 31, 1851, daughter of Wm. W. Andrews and Elizabeth Littlejohn Jones (daughter of Dr. Isaac Newton Jones), were born in the same house, known as the home of Dr. Isaac Newton Jones, located near the so called Big Magnolia Tree.

This information was given me by my mother, "Mollie" Andrews Royston. With best personal regards

Holt Charges
Negative Campaigning

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Frank Holt, who so far has not criticized his opponents in the Democratic gubernatorial race, charged them Saturday with "negative campaigning."

Holt has been called the "machine candidate" by various other hopefuls throughout the campaign.

"I have a public record," Holt said. "Show where I have been dominated."

Holt and several other candidates appeared at a political rally at Fordyce. Preceding Holt was Kenneth Sulcer, who pointed out that Holt was the only candidate who had advertised in Gov. Orval Faubus' newspaper, the Arkansas Statesman.

Holt said, however, that his opponents were all good men and that he was not seeking office on their demerits. "But on my qualifications."

Republican Rockefeller joined Sulcer in attacking the administration.

"You've heard about this scandal-free administration," Rockefeller said, "now you're reading about one scandal after another."

Brooks Hays spoke on his record of public service as an aide to the late President John F. Kennedy, but did not mention President Johnson, whom he served in the same capacity.

Dale Alford reminded the crowd that he was the first in the Democratic race to offer a highway safety program but that "another candidate came out with one July 8." His proposal was advanced May 30, Alford said.

Bernard Whetsone of El Dorado, an attorney, spoke for Jim Johnson, who was at Booneville.

Johnson said he wasn't afraid to stand up to the federal government. He told the Booneville audience, "By electing Jim Johnson governor, we will tell the world that we in Arkansas will not be overcome. We shall stand up and tell them that we are tired of the persecution of the majority."

Raymond Rebsamen was scheduled to appear at Fordyce, but his plane could not land safely at the airport. He said earlier at Crosssett that his experience as a business man could bring efficiency and honesty to the management of the state's revenues.

Sam Boyce did not appear at the rally in Fordyce because of a major television speech he had already scheduled.

In the speech, Boyce said he foresees the possibility of the Democratic nominee withdrawing from the race, leaving the field clear for Faubus to enter the general election as an independent.

He based the possibility on two things, Boyce said. "It has been charged that some candidates might become the beneficiaries of federal judgeships or the recipients of other patronage, regardless of becoming a winner or loser in the primary," he said.

"This charge, added to the governor's behavior and statements, raises the possibility that these same candidates might choose to resign a Democratic nomination and leave the party without a nominee."

Johnson has charged that Holt was promised a federal judgeship if he were not elected.

All nine gubernatorial candidates will appear on an hour-long program over KARK Radio and Television in Little Rock he wants to be governor.

ORANGE, Tex. (AP) — A former speech teacher at Arkansas A&M, who was dismissed because of petitions he circulated against the use of the strap at Arkansas State Penitentiary, has resigned from the Texas Anti-Fraud Committee.

H. Brent Davis said he resigned because of the unfavorable publicity received after two evolution debates he helped sponsor in Little Rock, Ark.

The publicity did not tend to cast the committee in a favorable light, he said.

State to Receive
$6.7 Millions

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The Office of Economic Opportunity at Dallas said Sunday that Arkansas will receive $6.7 million during the first 11 months of fiscal 1966-67 for community action programs.

William H. Crook, director of the Southwest Region of the OEO, said the amount was more than $500,000 above the budget for the full fiscal year.

"But we felt committed to approve certain applications that represented much time and effort by local Arkansas agencies," Crook said.

Kansas Youth
Dies in Wreck
Near DeQueen

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
A Kansas youth was killed early Sunday when he was struck by a pickup truck on Arkansas 41, about six miles south of De Queen.

Sheriff Louis Hilton quoted Danny Potter, 15, of De Queen as saying he and the victim, Michael E. Walts, became sleepy and went to sleep on the highway.

The 15-year-old Wichita, Kan., youth had been visiting in De Queen. Potter was hospitalized in De Queen and was listed in critical condition.

Hilton said the boys were struck by a truck driven by William A. Hickey, 67, of Buna, Tex.

Only one other traffic fatality was reported in the state during the Associated Press weekend count from 6 p.m. Friday until midnight Sunday.

Gilbert Hice, 71, of near Paris in Logan County, was killed Saturday in a car-truck collision on Arkansas 109 one mile south of Paris. State Police said Hice's truck collided with a Beam and Hice's wife were hospitalized.

Hot, Humid
Is Forecast
for Arkansas

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
This is the day that someone will probably try to fry an egg on the sidewalk.

And some photographer will pose a pretty girl sitting on a cake of ice.

For it's going to be hot and humid in Arkansas as the forecast holds with mid-afternoon temperatures reaching 104 degrees in most areas of the state and as high as 106 in the hot spots.

The only hope for relief is in scattered afternoon and nighttime thunderstorms forecast through Tuesday night.

Little Rock's high of 103 degrees Sunday matched the record for July 10 set in 1930.

For the second straight day heat expansion caused a section of Interstate 30 southwest of Little Rock to buckle and break. Traffic was routed around the break which was quickly repaired by Highway Department crews.

Air Strike
Negotiations
Going Slow

By GAYLORD SHAW
WASHINGTON (AP) — Negotiators meet today to tackle the wage issue and other national disputes in the strike against five airlines which has grounded thousands of travelers at the peak of the summer vacation season.

No progress toward a settlement was reported in advance of the joint bargaining session scheduled for mid-morning of the strike's fourth day.

This marks the first time negotiators have met face-to-face since more than 35,000 ground personnel walked off their jobs with the five major airlines Friday.

Assistant Secretary of Labor James J. Reynolds, who shuttled between the two rooms, arranged the joint meeting, telling reporters that 10 hours of talks Saturday and Sunday had brought no progress.

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz was keeping President Johnson posted on negotiations, Reynolds said. Johnson returns to Washington from his Texas ranch today.

Wirtz, who was touring the Far East when the strike started, entered the sluggish negotiations Sunday. As talks moved into the night, he told reporters, "I should say with all candor that there is no reasonable basis for expecting any major developments in the situation."

As talks recessed for the night, Reynolds had a glum report. "I think the time has come for resuming joint meetings," he said. "I think it is extremely important that this be done."

Joint sessions had been held before the strike began.

Wages remain the major issue. The union is seeking increases of about 53 cents an hour over three years. The airlines have offered a three-year contract with a 30-cent raise.

A presidential emergency board recommended increases of 44 to 48 cents an hour. Top-rated mechanics now receive $3.52 an hour with pay ranging down to $2.25 for janitors.

Other unsettled national issues include vacations, holidays, health and welfare plans, pensions, overtime and hours.

The strike against the five airlines — Eastern, National, Northwest, Trans World and United — has paralyzed much of the nation's air commerce. Normally, the five carriers handle 60 per cent of the domestic industry's business.

Nonstruck airlines added extra flights after the Civil Aeronautics Board authorized emergency steps to meet the gap a 220-volt line while trying to hook up an air conditioner.

Authorities said Herbert Hawkins, 62, was on a utility pole when the accident occurred near his store.

By ROBERT TUCKMAN
SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — The Viet Cong shot down three American helicopters in South Viet Nam, killing four U.S. and nine South Vietnamese soldiers, while two more U.S. jets were lost in the air war against the Communist North, an American spokesman announced today.

A Navy fighter-bomber became the 255th plane lost in the 17-month air war against North Viet Nam early today. The bombing continued with an attack on another oil storage depot 130 miles west-northwest of Hanoi near the old French base, of Dien Bien Phu. The pilots reported that two buildings were damaged.

Ground fighting in South Viet Nam died down, with both U.S. and Vietnamese headquarters reporting only light patrol contacts.

City Police

Saturday on West Third, a City Police car driven by Officer John Shirley was attempting to pass a pickup truck driven by Clarence Blake, Hope, when the pickup made a left turn.

Four small children were in the rear of the pickup, so Officer Shirley turned the police car off the highway and hit a parked car owned by Norman Fuller Jr., McCaskill.

The parked car and the city car were heavily damaged. State Policeman Leon Stokes investigated and charge Blake with making an improper turn and for not having proper brakes.

City Police said an auto driven by Willie Cooper, Negro, ran a stop sign and into another car driven by Wester Ponder of Washington. The incident occurred Saturday at 6 p.m. at Rose Hill and Spruce Streets. Officers McCulley and Brown charged Cooper with driving while intoxicated.

At Third and Elm yesterday while an Army convoy was going through the city a Taxicab driven by Otel Lively and an auto driven by Thelma Richie of Fort Worth, collided with considerable damage resulting.

City Police said there was a mixup on signals given by the Army personnel stationed at each light to direct traffic. No charges were filed.

OUT 'OUR WAY

THE HORRIBLE EXAMPLE

By NEG COCHRAN

You are going to get rather tired with today's South hand because you are going to see it repeated for several days more.

The reason is that when your partner opens the bidding with one of any suit but spades you are in the "Hanged if you do, hanged if you don't" position.

If you bid you can get into trouble. If you pass you can get into trouble. It is a "book" pass but any winning player is going to respond one spade.

He knows that he is asking for trouble by bidding but he figures that he is asking for worse trouble if he passes and he also knows that if by some lucky chance his partner can raise spades everything may come up roses as a result of his spade bid.

The roses bloom today. He responds one spade and North raises to four spades. West opens the king of hearts. South wins with dummy's ace and plays ace and king of spades.

Then he takes the diamond finesse which loses to East's king. If East and West don't grab a club trick and a heart trick immediately, South will make an overtrick. Nothing will keep him from making his game.

If South passes at one diamond West may decide to bid a heart. Or he may look at that singleton spade and decide to let North struggle at one diamond. If he passes to one diamond, North will probably make about two odd.

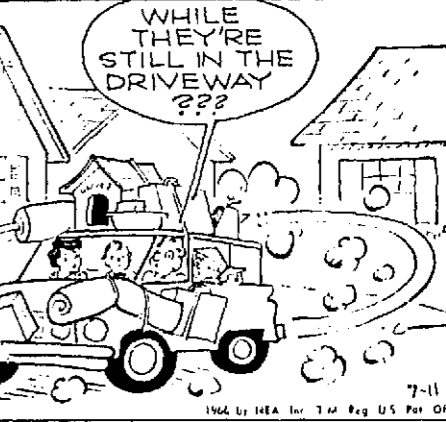

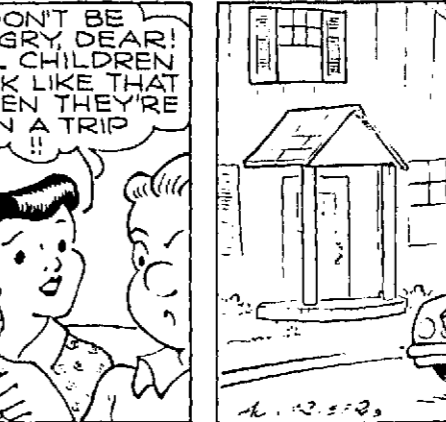

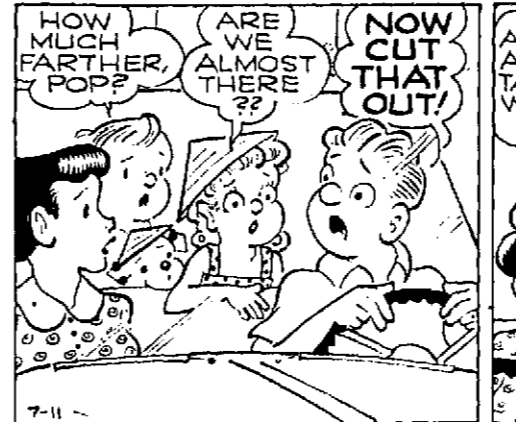

If West reopens with one heart anything may happen. North and South may still find their spade fit and play at four spades. It is more likely that East and West may buy the contract at some number of hearts. If they buy it at two, three or four they will make their contract. If they go to five against a four-spade bid they will only be down one trick.

Doug Misses Putt, Crown to Nicklaus

By RONALD THOMSON
swing left the longest memory after the British Open Golf Championship — even though he Doug Sanders of Ojai, Calif., one of the most colorful characters in the game, was shot by three inches with a putt on the home green Saturday that would have tied the winning score of 282 shot by champion Jack Nicklaus, the Golden Bear from Columbus, Ohio.

If that putt had gone in, Sanders and Nicklaus would have played off over 18 holes for the title Sunday — and anything could have happened.

But, speculation aside, Sanders caught the imagination of the knowledgeable Scottish golfer. His 71-70-72-70-283 was the most consistent golf shot on the 72-hole test over the difficult Muirfield links. It wasn't only consistent, it was entertaining and it gave the golf addicts something to talk about until the next British Open.

Sanders' wrist action powers the ball more than 300 yards off the tee despite his short backswing. How did he learn to do it that "Well," said Sanders, who has a wisecrack for every occasion, "I began playing golf with my employer's clubs."

"He might have come back any minute, so I didn't have time to swing the club very

Buckpasser Winner at Aqueduct

CHICAGO (AP) — Ogden Phipps' Buckpasser, victorious in 15 of 18 career starts, heads East to run in the $75,000 Dwyer Handicap at Aqueduct Saturday to nail down the 3-year-old championship.

The son of Tom Fool won the $103,000 Chicagoan at Arlington Park last Saturday with a late burst of speed as he closed in on the goal of $1 million.

Picking up the winner's share of $58,000, Buckpasser boosted his earnings to $839,964 despite having missed out on the rich Triple Crown purses this year because of injuries.

Buckpasser's margin in the 1 1/2-mile Chicagoan was three-quarters of a length over Whisker Jet but jockey Braulio Baeza said, "It wasn't as hard as it looked. I had a big hold on him in the backstretch but there wasn't much speed in the race so I moved a little earlier than usual. It may have been his easiest race."

The winning time was 1:49 1-5 because of the slow pace. Two weeks ago Buckpasser set the world record of 1:32 3-5 for the mile in the Arlington Classic.

If Buckpasser, the 2-year-old champion last year, hasn't already nailed down 3-year-old honors, he'll have a chance to make sure of the title in the Dwyer where he may meet Amberoid, the Belmont Stakes winner.

Mrs. Alford Has Ideas on the Mansion

By JOHN R. STARR
Associated Press Writer
LITTLE ROCK (AP)— Mrs. Dale Alford has some definite ideas for the governor's mansion if (she says when) her husband is elected as the state's chief executive.

"The mansion belongs to the people," she said. In line with this belief, she plans to hold periodic open houses and schedule regulated tours of the huge house at 18th and Center.

Right now Mrs. Alford, like the wives of most of the candidates, is engrossed in the campaign.

"I do what Dale tells me to do," she said. "Mostly I just go with him when he goes." Campaigning is a family affair with the Alfords. The married daughter, Mrs. David Goss; Dale's son, Dale Jr., 15, all are helping actively.

Mrs. Alford's friends say she prefers the quiet life, but she appears adapted to the idea of becoming a public figure as first lady. She has been active enough in civic affairs to be named Woman of the Year in Arkansas in 1962, the year her husband lost a race for governor.

The names her husband is called by opponents don't bother her this year. "We've been through that," she said. "Actually, this is the friendliest campaign we've had. The people are more receptive."

Mrs. Alford was born and reared at Sardis, Miss. She came to Little Rock 28 years ago as a civil service employee. Alford at that time was broadcasting University of Arkansas football games while attending medical school. She heard his radio voice and was intrigued by it.

"I met him when I went to the station with a friend," she said. She maintains that she did not go specifically to meet Alford. Be that as it may, she had a date with him the next night and they were married a year later in Greenwood, Miss., after he had finished his internship.

The two older children were born at Hot Springs where Alford was on the staff of the Army-Navy Hospital. Mrs. Alford lived at Hot Springs while he was in service during World War II.

How did she feel when her husband decided to get into politics?

"We're (speaking for the family) all for it," she said. "We didn't choose it, but we feel government belongs to the people, and we're people."

Was she disappointed when he was defeated in 1962? "No," she said. "We felt like victory was only two years away."

It turned out to be at least four years, but Mrs. Alford believes that the 1966 campaign is solidly based on the 1962 experience.

"There couldn't be a 1966 without 1962," she said. "You have to have a paving (of the way) on these things. You need experience. You need to meet the people. Almost everybody who was with us in 1962 is still with us."

Mrs. Alford has an unusual given name—L'Moore. It has been in her family for six generations, she said, and she passed it on to her older daughter.

Byrd Group Facing Tough Competition

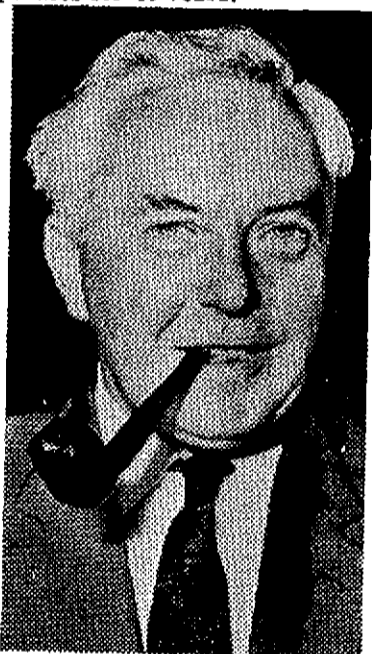

By JOHN DAFFRON
RICHMOND, Va. (AP)— The conservative Byrd organization faces the stiffest opposition yet to its political power from the moderate-liberal wing of the Democratic party in Tuesday's primary.

Virginia voters, with the unique chance to pick both Senate candidates, have a choice from among the two men in office, Sens. A. Willis Robertson and Harry F. Byrd Jr. and challengers with state legislature experience who have come on strong.

A third race of almost parallel interest is for the 8th District House seat where Rep. Howard W. Smith, a powerful congressional figure as chairman of the House Rules Committee, is — at 83 — seeking a 19th term.

A challenger nearly 40 years Smith's junior, George Rawlings Jr., a Fredericksburg attorney, has goaded the old conservative to do what he has seldom had to do in recent times — get out and campaign.

Byrd, who succeeded his retired and now gravely ill father last November by appointment, is opposed by Armistead L. Boothe, a north Virginia attorney who served with Byrd in the Robertson, at 79 the same age as Byrd Sr., is opposed by state Sen. William B. Spong Jr. Spong is rated as the strongest possibility to upset any of the three men running under the banner of the party organization established by Harry Byrd Sr. when he was governor of Virginia and the controlling faction in state politics for 40 years.

Had Problem of 109 Roosters

SAGINAW, Mich. (AP) — Just as a Tuscola County cockfight was getting good, an airplane swooped down and its loudspeaker blared at the 66 shouting fans:

"You're all under arrest."

It didn't help for the rooster-fight fans to run, police said.

Troopers dressed in camouflage uniforms had infiltrated the wooded area 30 miles east of Saginaw several hours before the fight fans arrived.

After Mayville Justice of the Peace George Foster fined each of the men $26 for loitering at an illegal event, police were faced with the problem of what to do with 109 roosters confiscated in the raid.
